Pack Activity Focus That Weaves Through Common Den Adventures

Tips for Working with lots of Cub Scouts on an Adventure

If you work with a lot of Cub Scouts, whether a large den, several dens or the entire pack, here are some tips:

- Create smaller workable groups. It will be easier to teach to smaller groups and will help keep Cub Scouts engaged.
- Be careful how you combine small dens. Combining Lions and Tigers is a good fit, but you usually do not want to go combine to many ranks together.
- Webelos and AOL ranks have changed a lot and are quite different ranks. They can no longer be easily combined.
- Create a rotation schedule so that Cub Scouts are constantly moving and doing things.
- Every Cub Scout must complete their rank requirements. It is okay to do more, but not okay to do less than required.
- Remember the activities for the requirement online are specific to each rank level. Although they sound the same, they are different and are age appropriate. The activities consider the Cub Scouts age.
- Recruit someone who is good at schedule and can create your rotation station schedule.
- Have many instructors – leaders, parents, and/or Scouts BSA.
- Be sure to have all the supplies and equipment needed prior to starting the Adventure.
